It contributions to this benevolent and useful is probably upon some such principle as this Institution. that China has become a favourite subject for morel lectures at home. The residents in these parts have at different times been soundly rated in the home papers for almost every one of the frailties, to which erring human nature is heir, and from the tone frequently adopted, it might be imagined that the evils spoken of existed nowhere: but of plaintiff. in China; that at home such things were upon the furf, by intexication, gambling or 370.—Judgment for plaintiff was given in this sessor, who also, at the request of never heard of as men zuining themselves other excesses, and that the ordinary life of Europeans in large cities was one of inno, cence itself. That there has been a great deal of exaggeration in the virtuous indignation which has been expended in this manner, there, can be no question; but at the same time it is impossible to deny that residents in these parts have given some cause for the adverse criticism which has been uttered. In one sense, probably, inorality in China is very much the same as in other places, that is, if allowance be made for the exceptional nature of life out here. But it is impossible to deny that less effort is made to keep discreditable facts in the background than is the case among to steal a bundle of bamboo canes from a shop other, communities making any pretentious to refinement and propriety. It is in this latter respect, that people here are most deficient. It was mainly to Shanghai that China residents were in debted some years back for a reputation of utter reckleseness in trade and speculation; for unlimited gambling and horse racing and for many other of the like failings. Some of the statements which were made at home THE whole, or part, of the Residence known were no doubt in excess of the facts, but there was a very good substatum of truth turday morning of the 5th inst. P.C. Jensen under them, and an impartial critic could hardly say that there was no cause; for the celebrated donunciation of Shanghai made by of the river. He went to ascertain what it was the Duke of Somensky, who, speaking from bis sent in the House of Lords, designated that place as a "sink of iniquity." When this somewhat unpalatable expression was made use of great indignation was aroused, and a rejoinder in the form of a "tu quoque" argument was not long in forthcoming. But, though plausible, the answer was not in reality conclusive, as there is a vast difference in a public point of view between shortcomings in morality, and a want of that sones of sion, doubtless, that they were wanted to take propriety, which in ordinary places, keeps such failings out of sight. It is obsering, in times like these, to know that there is nothing exceptional in this union between the Protestant Church and Freemasonavy; that' we number distinguished brethren upon the bench of Bishops, and that in all parts of this renim; the craft and the Reformed religion go hand in hand, inculcating the same duties, inspiring the same bopes, and impressing upon their adherents that broad charity, and that lively faith in good works, in which sensible men are content to live and die. (Cheers.) There was a time-a time which, measured by the years of our national life was not so very long ago, when the English clergy might have felt difficulty in becoming Freemasons, because of the absolute obedience to the duly constituted authority, and to the law of the land to which our brotherbood is committed. The House of Commons, after the fall of Wolsey, complained that the Clergy made laws in Convocation, for disobedience to which the laity were excommunicated. Yet those laws were often at variance with the laws of the realm. Archbishop Warham said he was sorry for this, but as the laws made by the clorgy were always in conformity with the will of God, the laws of the real whad only to be altered for the difficulty to vanish. (A laugh.) Well might the historian ask what must have been the position of the clergy in the fullness of their power when they could sprak thus on the eve of their f prostration. The public of England have been warned recently, and by high nuthority, that the opposing principles of shord-trailism and impious licence are abroad marshalling their respective forces, and that England may be culled upon to steer a middle course betweenthe language is Mr. Disraeli's -the cold and withering blast of atheism, and the acording simoum of sucerdotal usurpation." Churchmen soon learn that Masons are zealous ritualists; but that their ritualism is a fou to bigotry, to nebalous superetition, and to idelatry, however epecious may be it forms. Masonry and the Protestant religion both proclaim the volume of the Swred Law to be the releand guide of faith; but they do not teach that any frail and erring creature of the dust is infallible, or that interpretations of the sucred volume are to be accepted blindly and without judgment. In brief, the principles of the Reformation and the apirit of Freemasonry have so much in common, that if ever the bard-won fruits of the first are threatened, the duties and teaching of the Masonic Lodge will assuredly keep the brotherhood, both lay and clerical, on the side of loyalty, truth, and freedom, (Oheera) With all this we exclude no man for his faith, if that faith permits him to enter upon and to observe Masonic obligations. LOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them are bere given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature, including LOGS, 96 feet long and 26 inches Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are square, to arrive per French Barque "Amira given, the accents being carefully marked on Devouss, shortly expected from the Philippine the best principle hitherto attained. LORD NORTHBROOK AS GOVERNOR- Monthly. GENERAL OF INDIA. I had sufficient opportunity of observing that Lord Northbrook, might be compared not unfavourably with many of the greater Governor-Generals of India and that the in-stinct of the people of the country, which had led them to esteem and trust him almost from the commencement of his Viceryship. was by no means an erroneous one. They are extremely acute, and wonderfully just judges of character; and I knew that their opinion on this subject was shared by many of the Englishmen who were best acquainted with India and most devoted to its interests. If the new Viceroy did not equal Lord Mayer in the charm of personal manner, and in power of setting every one around him to work energetically on their own lines, he possessed what is more specially needed at present, more than Lord Mayo's power of holding his great officers in hand, and of refusing to allow their specialties and crotchets being run to excess and developed to the detriment of India and of the Imperial Interestaof Great Britain. If he had now all Lord Elgin's experience and largeminded dealed ing with the outlying questions of English policy, he brought to bear upon them the caution the trained habits, the ceaseless. thoughtful energy of an English statesman in a manner which colonial and Indian officials have little opportunity of practising FIRE to the extent of £10,000 on Buildings, or themselves in.
